Training for Lectors

Making Scripture Come Alive Second Edition

with Stella A. Northrup
and the Lectors of St. Paul's, Indianapolis

"You have produced a timely resource that deserves to be widely used... My prayer is that many may use this material and that they and their congregations alike benefit from it."

The Most Reverend and Rt. Honorable George Carey
Former Archbishop of Canterbury

"This is an excellent, timely and most important piece of work for the church."

The Rt. Rev. Michael Marshall
Founding Episcopal Director, The Anglican Institute

"...the Proclamation of Scripture is an important ministry, and needs far more attention than it sometimes gets! Your materials have already proved helpful to Lectors at St. Paul's, and it's exciting to think they will have wider circulation."

The Rt. Reverend Catherine M. Waynick
Bishop of Indianapolis

You Go To Church to Hear God's Word...

then the scripture is read. Perhaps you have experienced one or more of the following:

- Fast Reading
- Soft Talking
- Inarticulate Speaking
- Interpretation which lacks meaning

Your worship experience could be enriched by clear, sensitive reading of the scriptures.

Lectors have an awesome responsibility

Lectors are dedicated lay people who volunteer time for God's Kingdom. They, and their parishes, will benefit from training in the skills of interpreting scripture because, as retired priest Bruce Whitehead has written,

"Readers of lessons are not reading to themselves; they are declaring what the word of God is for God's people at this time. Read it, announce it for the timeless, vital message that it is."

The First Edition of Training for Lectors has helped lectors in hundreds of parishes around the world.

We Learn Best By Practice and Feedback

It's a funny thing. We usually don't know how we sound to other people, especially when speaking in public. To improve our skills, we need four things:

1. An understanding of the principles involved.
2. Positive examples which illustrate three principles in action.
3. Application of the techniques through personal practice.
4. Feedback and evaluation of our performance.

Training for Lectors allows you to move through all four phases of the learning process.
